Kolping University of Applied Science (KUAS) has been operating as a public institution in Lithuania since 1996. It offers a professional bachelor's degree providing higher education. Its founder is the Lithuanian Kolping Foundation, a Catholic charity and support organisation.

One of the goals for establishing the KUAS as an institution was to establish an educational institution to educate socially responsible people.

Another goal is to help young people to realise their dignity and worth, gain self-confidence and, once they have acquired solid professional knowledge, become skilled professionals able to adapt to a fast-changing labour market.
